

End of the Road.

On occasion, blood samples need to be transported from one location to another for further analysis. The distance the blood sample has to travel can, depending on geography, be long. In many cases the transport of blood has the greatest impact on "Turnaround Time" of results back to the doctor. Connecting your remote labs with a CellaVision DC-1 marks the "End of the Road" for blood samples and removes any need for a car mechanic in the process of performing cell differentials.

www.cellavision.com

Look out for the next issue in September.